Former OTA Student has Articles Published

Occupational Therapy Alumnus, Mandy Yelvington, works in the burn unit at the Arkansas Children's Hospital.

In August of 2013, Yelvington had an article published in the Journal of International Society for Burn Injuries. Recently, Yelvington had an article accepted for publishing in the American Burn Magazine. The articles focus on the healing and the recovery process for burn victims.

The faculty in the OT program commends Mandy on her publications. Dr. Patti Calk, MOT Program Director said, "Occupational Therapy Assistants and Occupational Therapists serve an important role and function in the health care of patients who have disabilities or impairments. As the articles by Ms. Yelvington report, one of these roles is to help patients who have been severely burned return to activities of daily living."

The Occupational Therapy Program at ULM prepares and encourages students to be successful in their careers as Occupational Therapist.
